Scott Hubbell and I met 40 years ago on the beach in Santa Monica. We were both very young lifeguards and had a great deal in common. In addition to sharing our love of the ocean, beach, water and rescue, we shared our dreams with each other. Mine was to create a television series about "lifeguards"... and Scott was instrumental, not only in the creation of the series but ultimately in its execution - over a period of 14 years. He was one of the first people to say... "hey, good idea" when most people didn't really think it was a good idea... and he was THE first to extend a hand to help me make my dream come true when it came time to shoot something.

Over a period of years from 1988 to 2002 we produced 289 episodes of "Baywatch" together. Scott was in charge of everything from the parking lot to Catalina! Water craft, Air craft, Scuba, Stunts, Fire, Explosions - and the most important thing PEOPLE!

If it happened on the sand, in the water, under or over the water, I went to Scott first. It was Scott that was ultimately responsible for the creative and successful execution of action sequences in the series...

This was the case when we shot the very first 3 minute "Baywatch Promo" in 1988 which ultimately helped sell the series to NBC, all the way to the final episode in our final year in Los Angeles. When we moved Baywatch to Hawaii in 1999 it was Scott who introduced me to his own successor... one of his best friends in Hawaii, Brian Keaulana.

Over the course of my years with Scott, we had one injury of significance - a broken ankle (Annie Ellis!). Not a bad safety record for one of the biggest action/adventure series of its time. Scott supervised the production of over 500 action sequences - just for Baywatch - not counting all of the other television work he has done over the years.

One of the things I admire most about Scott is his character, integrity and honesty... If I had to do something "risky" he would find a way to do it safely or he would talk me out of attempting it. If we did it, and if it turned out good, which happened most of the time, Scott was no-where to be found. If it was NOT good, Scott was there with his hand in the air saying "it's my fault - and here is how we can fix it."

He is, without a doubt, the most talented and experienced producer of beach and water action I know of. He remains my first call when I do anything near the water because, he not only has my best interest in mind but has a safety record that is unparalleled. He is a great friend and a great producer... but he is a lifeguard first and foremost.

Congratulations Scott on a fantastic first half of your career... I hope there are many more years and episodes in your lifeguard bag of tricks! To me, you are a lifeguard's lifeguard.

2015 Lifetime Achievement Award

Scott Hubbell

A description of Scott Hubbell's accomplishments and contributions could go on for pages, and any attempt to list them in the space provided would be a futile enterprise. Not only is Scott one of the strongest lifeguard competitors in history, but his tireless fundraising and philanthropic efforts over the years have been instrumental in promoting, advancing, and celebrating the lifeguard community. In fact, without his unwavering support, it would be impossible to stage the International Surf Festival.

Scott grew up on the beaches of Santa Monica and Malibu and was constantly in and around the water as a boy. After establishing himself as a champion youth swimmer and water polo player, he seamlessly transitioned into a respected lifeguard competitor, beginning his beach lifeguard career in 1975 on Venice Beach during the merger of the L.A. City and L.A. County lifeguard services. His lifeguarding skills were honed in Zuma Beach in the 1970s and 1980s, where Scott earned respect from his peers and superiors for his rescue skills in any size surf. Chief Con Rohrer stated, "The worse the conditions got, the better Hubbell performed." Scott credits his success to the mentors who helped him learn the ropes.

Scott's competitive accolades, both international and domestic, are impressive, as he won dozens of individual and team championships throughout the years. He was always humble in victory and gracious in defeat. Perhaps even more impressive, is Scott's dedication to the promotion and exposure of lifeguard competitions. Since 1976, his production company, Scott Hubbell Productions Inc., has staged and sponsored over 400 lifeguard and waterman related competitions. Additionally, SHP Inc. branched out to provide water safety services in over 300 film and television productions and Scott was an essential creative force behind the iconic Baywatch Television franchise.

Because of this success, Scott was tabbed by the Department of Beaches and Harbors to administrate the Special Events Permits program. In that role, Scott was able to triple the amount of permit income for the L.A. County coffers, and the county continues to utilize Scott's blueprint to this day. He also designed the first beach marketing concept approved by the L.A. County Board of Supervisors and served as the marketing and competition director for the L.A. County Lifeguard Association for two decades, generating substantial funding for innumerable public education materials, junior lifeguard events, team uniforms, racing equipment, and travel funds.

Scott's "Beachsport.org" continues to support and promote lifeguarding and surf racing competitions to this day.

Put Simply, Scott Hubbell is a true champion of the lifeguarding community in every sense of the word.
